CARROLLTON, Ga., Sept. 9 /PRNewswire/ -- The Massachusetts e-Health Institute, a division of the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative, has selected Greenway Medical Technologies, Inc.'s single-database electronic health record (EHR), practice management and interoperability solution PrimeSuite® [1] as a preferred EHR solution for its statewide deployment initiative within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) REC healthcare grant program [2].

"Greenway® is continually gratified that Prime*Suite* is being recognized by REC administering agencies across the country for the interoperability platform, data exchange capabilities and the pursuit of Meaningful Use through the guaranteed functionality we provide," said President and CEO Tee Green. "We are fully invested in working with the Massachusetts e-Health Institute to enable statewide care coordination through the commitments we have already established for physician practice customers in Massachusetts, and to facilitate the establishment of a national health information network."

With the institute's designated Implementation and Optimization Organizations (IOOs), Greenway will collaborate to provide practices with workflow analysis, timeline, data migration, implementation and training services to streamline the clinical, financial and administrative processes of EHR deployment.

"We are pleased to have Greenway Medical Technologies join our select list of certified health IT companies that will help thousands of healthcare providers across Massachusetts successfully transition to electronic health records," said Rick Shoup, Ph.D., director of the Massachusetts e-Health Institute. "Widespread deployment of electronic health records leads to better quality care for patients, reduces healthcare cos
