Vitera Healthcare

Solutions(http://www.viterahealthcare.com/Pages/default.aspx), one of the nation's largest providers of electronic health records and practice management software and services, announced today the appointment of Lara Caldwell Stout as Vice President of Professional Services. Stout brings more than 14 years of healthcare technology experience to this role, where she will work closely with the team to optimize training, data conversions and software delivery for Vitera's client practices.

"I am delighted to begin this new venture at Vitera Healthcare Solutions and lead the Professional Services team," said Stout.

"Healthcare is one of the fastest-growing industries of the 21st century and I am proud to participate in providing robust technologies that support and streamline management at medical practices across the country."

Prior to joining Vitera Healthcare Solutions, Stout was Vice President of Services Operations and Methodology at McKesson, a leading healthcare solutions company. During the course of her career at McKesson, she held various leadership roles, including responsibility for the company's Document Imaging Services group. Before working at McKesson, Stout was Practice Director at Quovadx, a provider of healthcare integration software and transaction services.

"Lara's experience in healthcare technology is remarkable and aligns with our needs and goals," said Matthew Hawkins, Chief Executive Officer at Vitera Healthcare Solutions. "Her solid track record of building great service organizations to meet market demand and coaching successful implementation teams will help us deliver outstanding training and service to our clients."

Stout received a Bachelor's of Business Administration in Marketing from Georgia State University.
