Quest Diagnostics Marks Ninth Year on Dow Jones Sustainability Index

Bio-Medicine.Org

MADISON, N.J., Sept. 14, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- Quest Diagnostics Incorporated (NYSE: DGX [1]), the world's leading provider of diagnostic testing, information and services, has again been named to the Dow Jones Sustainability World Index and North America Index. Quest Diagnostics is in its ninth year on the World Index (since 2004) and in its eighth on the North America Index (since 2005).

"All of us at Quest Diagnostics are proud to have again earned a place on the Dow Jones Sustainability Index," said Steve Rusckowski, Quest Diagnostics' President and Chief Executive Officer. "We take even greater pride in the commitments these rankings reflect – to the patients we serve, our employees and their families, and the communities and environments where we work and live."

Launched in 1999, the DJSI are the first global indexes tracking the financial performance of the leading sustainability-driven companies worldwide. The DJSI enable investors to integrate sustainability considerations into their portfolios while providing an effective engagement platform for encouraging companies to adopt sustainable best practices. The result of the Corporate Sustainability Assessment provides an in-depth analysis of economic, environmental and social criteria, such as corporate governance, water-related risks and stakeholder relations, with a special focus on industry-specific risks and opportunities.
