MoMelan gets mo' money in $2.9M first round

Mass High Tech: The Journal of New England Technology

Cambridge medical device company MoMelan Technologies Inc. has raised $2.9 million of a planned $5 million funding round, according to federal documents [1].

This is the first institutional round for MoMelan, which is making a device designed to stretch skin to improve the cost, time and patient experience of skin graft procedures. The names of the 18 backers in this funding round were not released in the filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.
