

U.S. medtech lobbies join forces to blaze trails in China

Mass Device

The Medical Imaging & Technology Alliance and the Advanced Medical Technology Assn. join forces to reduce medical device trade barriers with China.

A pair of medical technology lobbying groups joined forces on a series of initiatives designed to reduce trade barriers between China and the U.S. and "harmonize international standards for medical devices."

The Medical Imaging & Technology Alliance and the Advanced Medical Technology Assn. last week led a 2-day standards workshop during the U.S.-China Joint Commission on Commerce and Trade Pharmaceuticals & Medical Device Subgroup meeting, according to a press release.

The meeting aimed to "increase the Chinese government's familiarity with the standard and further expedite their transition process," according to a statement. The workshop was joined by representatives from North and South America as well as Europe and Asia.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/27/2015 - 8:30am):

http://www.mdtmag.com/news/2012/09/us-medtech-lobbies-join-forces-blaze-trails-china?qt-recent_content=0