Group purchasing organization Novation touts new contract for Lighthouse's full line of endoscopic testing instruments.

Lighthouse Imaging has signed a contract with group purchasing organization Novation for its endoscope image quality tester.

Products included in the GPO agreements are the Portland, ME.-based medical device company's EndoBench endoscope testers, which allow hospitals to quantitatively measure rigid and flexible endoscope optical quality, while ensuring patient safety before the procedure and verify the proper repair after service, according to a press release.
